P-1964.003.013	91	Luce Ranch. C.S. Luce standing in front of the house which he built in Poway in about 1876. He had planted a small orchard and a vinyard, and the place was rather well developed; in fact, far better developed than the land is at the present time. At a point where the Ramona Road, branching off from Highway 395, crosses the old Escondido Road is the scene of this old house, although nothing now remains but a portion of the foundation. However, there is at this point a grove of Eucalyptus atrees which were planted by grandfather and which are still thriving. My grandfather built a lilttle church next to the house, with his own hands, and preached there until his death. During that time, heperformed the marriage ceremony for many San Diegans of that period. He died in this old housein about 1897 and was buried in the little cemetery at Poway.
